Scrub typhus test (Rapid

Interpretation

This test only detects the presence of IgG, IgM or IgA O. tsutsugamushi antibodies in the specimen and should not be used as the sole criterion for the diagnosis of scrub typhus. As with all diagnostic test, result must be considered with other clinical information avilable to the physician. If the result is negative and clinical symptoms persist, additional follow-up testing using other clinical methods is recommended. A negative result does not preclude the possibility of infection with O. tsutsugamushi.

Kindly correlate with clinical findings
